TrueOrder™ Kitchen Display System (KDS)

The ideal way to add a kitchen display system to your point-of-sale software

If your POS system works with an Epson printer, it can be readily compatible with this versatile KDS.

Meet the TrueOrder™ KDS, the ideal kitchen display solution to integrate into your point-of-sale (POS) system.

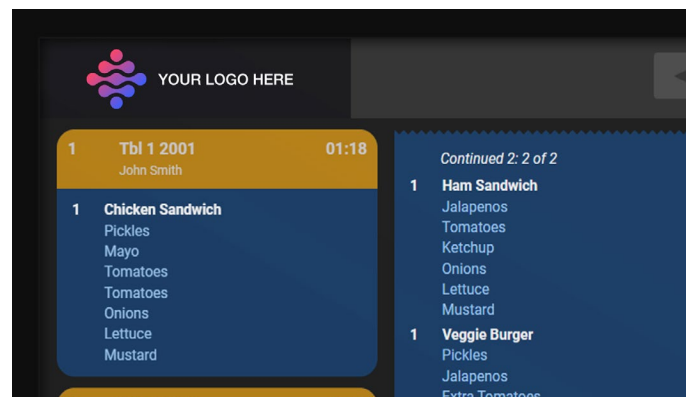

Easy user experience — intuitive user interface is ideal for quick-service restaurant (QSR) or small-restaurant environments with fewer than 10 stations

Flexible workflows — configure to match existing workflows with one or more kitchen stations—any station can become an expediter or customer-facing order status screen

Plug-and-play item labeling — add an Epson label printer at any station to print personalized labels for take-out bags, to-go cups and more

Brand it as your own — adjust colors and layout to match your brand—you can even add your own logo

Easy setup and management

Simple configurator — intuitive, browser-based configurator utility is accessible from most devices with a Web browser

Customize defaults — preconfigure specific elements to match your existing ecosystem and help get customers up and running even faster

Room for growth — includes a comprehensive API and world-class developer support for more in-depth integration or advanced reporting

Kitchen-worthy hardware — available on a variety of robust hardware—choose traditional bump bars, modern touchscreens, or a combination of the two; existing displays can be reused by pairing with a media player

Engineered for reliability — connect to the restaurant's local network, no Internet connection required
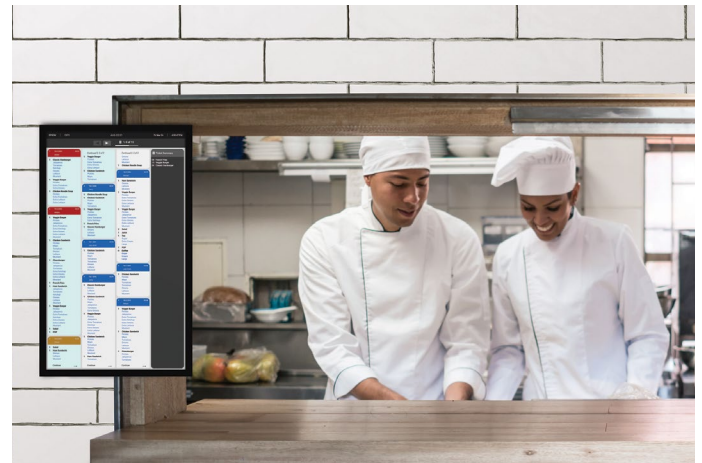

Help Maximize value

No recurring software or subscription fees — comes with a one-time license per station

Free POS integration — provided free of charge by Epson when updates are needed for POS compatibility; usually delivered within just a few weeks

Skip the typical upcharges — no additional software cost for features such as label printing and custom branding
